Plun Is Unfolded.

This project was unfolded at a meeting held yesterday afternoon at the home of the provisional president, Mrs. R. D. Shepherd. Invitations had been sent out to women representa-tives of various fields of activity and the meeting conducted along lines pre viously laid out at a first meeting by the original organizers.

Women's city clubs, on the order

Intelligent Observation of Rules of Hygiene Will Decrease Illness.

By DR. LEONARD K. HIRSHBERG

Have you ever been hungry? "Foolish question!" you exclaim. There are many people so unhappy that they have never known hunger. Perhaps you think live tissues are like a magnet. One draws food as the other does metal.

The stomach is said by some logists to demand food by instinct, just as a chick pecks its way out of the shell or a duckling swims when it gets into water. The uncomfortable sensation felt in the pit of the stomach, called hunger, certainly is not the result of the sight or thought of victuals and drink. It is a pang set up by the windmill or whirliging motions of the muscles of the stomach walls.

The instant soups or other rations hit the trail of the "tummy," the pangs cease. Even a glass of water, according to Dr. Minna C. Denton, of Ohio State University, sometimes checks hunger, even if the fluid is not awallowed. This latter fact was proved by Prof. Carlson's patient who had to be fed with a tube, because nothing could be swallowed.

No Relation to Appetite.

Hunger is but slightly, if at all, concerned with the environment, education and kind of food eaten. It has less to do, with appetite, which is a much more pleasant compound of memories, tastes, sight, and smell. Hunger is largely a muscular state

It is influenced by vigor, physique, stamina, youth, and animal activities. A flabby, weak, non-muscular man is apt seldom to be hungry. A tried In explanation of the project Mrs. out, exhausted, ill or debilitated pershepherd said today:
